End Term Exam: 60

Duration of Exam: 3 Hrs

Objective and outcome of course:

Human rights are an important focal point in international affairs in the 21st century. Various institutions at International level have been established to focus on this important issue. Decisions about many crucial issues – how aid funding is distributed, how refugee and migration movements are regulated, when and why states may engage in armed conflict with each other, and the control and distribution of material goods – are guided by human rights theory, and governed by human rights treaties and international human rights law. Human rights influence domestic politics — in the justice system, healthcare, education, and welfare policy.
